Agree Or Not

I Say What I Think

By R. C. VAN CUREN

By S. C. Van Curen
The landmark decision of the Court of Appeals to assess property at fair cash value has settled all of the problems of schools and other branches of government by any means.

In fact, it may have created a host of problems that will occupy the 1966 session of the General Assembly.

School districts with vast bond issues outstanding need an immediate problem. Rates are written into the bond indentures. Take a county with an average assessment now of 20 per cent on agriculture land and the school district has voted 50 cents to retire bonds. If the rate is raised to 100 per cent, the school district will have to raise the rate to 100 per cent.

Some school districts have voted an extra 50 cents to pay for construction of new buildings but no bonds are issued. The levy is 50 cents and the school district will have to raise the rate to 100 per cent.

As far as the state is concerned, the necessity for Governor Edward T. Breathitt to call a special session in the near future is a possibility. The governor is to meet Monday with school boards to discuss what they have done or plan to do in their series of meetings.

At a recent meeting, the state was the only one to call a special session. The state has been to the state capital in Raleigh, N.C., to discuss the state's financial situation.

The state's financial situation is a serious one. The state's financial situation is a serious one. The state's financial situation is a serious one. The state's financial situation is a serious one.

Three Copperhead Snakes Killed In Home

By John Lucas

Last week the daughter and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vandyard Craft, Mrs. Jean Bentley and Linda, answered the call of Christ by going to the altar and was converted. They were baptized in the South Daytona Christian Church. We like to hear about things like this. It is the most important decision of one's entire life.

Last Sunday Miss Lynda Carol Mullins, of Haymond, sideswiped Mr. Sherman Hampton's porch and the wall around his porch, and tore part of it down.

George Poliver has gone back to a Louisville hospital. We wish him a speedy recovery.

Arthur Cantrell and his family have come back to Hazard for a few days. Arthur has been employed in Dayton, Ohio with Montgomery Ward and Co.

Ernest Austin reports that he killed three Copperheads a few days ago under his mother's refrigerator. Josh Wright killed a ground hog under Mrs. Nola Edington's floor.

WHILE IT IS FRESH

On my mind, I just wonder how many people noticed the flags on main street Sunday Memorial Day? It was indeed a sight I have never seen before. The only thing I could say was wrong with this display, was because they didn't leave it up through Monday. My hat must go off to the LIONS CLUB OF HAZARD. Although they do a wonderful work toward the helping of the kids in our area that need glasses to pursue their studies. This flag program really did impress me as I drove through Main Street Sunday morning, May 30. It had an uplifting effect which I am sure it did the same to many of you as it did to me. It made you realize what the day was meant for. All of you that have contributed to this, I must say it has brought out some pride to show that we are still alive here in EASTERN KY. I understand that the Lions Club would like to have another fifty flags by this time next year these to flow on the BY PASS, they are asking sponsors for each flag. To YOU BOTH BUSINESS PEOPLE AND PROFESSIONAL PEOPLE THAT HAVEN'T HELPED IN THIS PROJECT I would say that you are letting a good deed go to waste. PRIDE TO ME of your area and community, can mean so much to the passing motorists. LET'S ALL CIVIC CLUBS START AN EXTRA PROJECT SUCH AS THE LIONS CLUB HAS DONE. Let's all become a part of these projects.

I AM BEHIND

With many fishing reports, Barber Bill Adams caught a four pounder at Buckhorn, on night crawlers, twenty inches long, just drifting. Walden Silvers Jr., seventeen years old, 19 Smallmouth on Buckhorn Lake, cray fish was used for bait. Many of you have reported nice catches of blue gill and crappie from Barabara Lake. Chester Stacy has had evening catching at on the head waters of Buckhorn, yes Chester Musky will hit most any time of the year. This I have had experience with. They are the most unpredictable fish I think that roam our waters. They can snatch you to pieces plus your tackle in short order.

IT WAS NICE

To see and talk with so many of you through this past spring. Glenn Branson of Lone Grove, Calif. Glenn is a sophomore out on that far away place from his old home-stead, his father Everett was along on our visit and talks. Believe me he sure looks like the man you would expect to be a peace officer, yes one that you would have respect for. The only thing that bothers me is to see so many of you young people come back for a visit, when we should be using your talent right here with our own people. Maybe the picture will turn greater one of these days toward home. Step

We Must Have Faith In Ourselves

I have often heard people say "I just can't do it." They have joined themselves to failure, and are not willing to shake themselves loose from the leeches that cling to them. When I was a lad on Birch River I often found my ankles loaded with leeches as I waded or swam the river. My first thought likely was to inquire what they were, and what they were doing so flat on my ankles. If I left them long enough they would turn red from sucking the blood from my body. So I learned the hard way to get them clear of my ankles and destroy them dead.

All through our lives we are gathering leeches of one kind or another on us. Sometimes it may be the bad habit that clings to us, and sucks out life-blood. It may be diseases that plague our bodies, or it may be immoral living that brings us down to destruction far before our time.

We must be always waring and dodging those ugly things that feed on us, and destroy them before they destroy us. We have gone far enough in medical science to know that our lives are far longer now than they were in our grandfather's days. It begins to look like we may be mere infants at the age of 50. All this increase of life and usefulness has been brought about by our observing rules of health, and it will continue to be so for many generations to come. We may wonder why we are living so long, and for what purpose; but we will leave that wonder for you to answer.

Life is so rich, beautiful, and rewarding for this generation that we must not break faith with ourselves. We must keep our real faith alive. We must think well of ourselves, and develop all the skills God has given us for useful living in these great and wonderful days.

One of the finest qualities of our lives is that thing we call FAITH IN OURSELVES. If we downgrade ourselves who will upgrade us? I play golf with people from many parts of the nation when I am alone and pick up a partner, or two. One of the stocks in the trade of the game is early shown when some of them say, "I am not much of a golfer." Then when the whiz away and cut it away out under a palm tree they begin to downgrade themselves or their ball or club. I have long ago taken up the habit of saying, "We will have no downgrading ourself" while we play on this course, and as for downgrading your ball, you can quit that, for the ball will go exactly where you drive it." All golfers, including Bill Blair, Whitesburg, know that is the way it is. I have seen some good games of golf after the period of the loss of faith in the player has been restored.

Sometimes it is necessary for us to take an accounting of ourselves and give ourselves a boost, a hike, or a kick in the seat of the pants. Too many of us are likely to fold up and quit just when we are ready to win, or to think of it what would have happened if many projects such as the GERMAN, a project that went into orbit last week if our people from Eastern Ky hadn't helped so far where down the line.

BLESS MY HIDE

With all this space craft that has been in progress, I am like my old friend Mrs. Vest Hamilton from up MACEYS Creek Way, just as sure as spring comes around, it always brings the bees, flowers and etc., above all Aunt Vest says it sure brings out those HONEYEATERS. Believe me her prediction has hit the nail on the head. I often wonder if this keeps up if there will be enough food on this earth to take care of this ever increasing population. I doubt very much. Our fish and wildlife will hold out to the next few generations, maybe we must have to cultivate our streams such as England is trying to do. Take making them into farms. Then we will be on a Commercial scale, pay the owners above never let us the United States give into this category, may we always have the peace of outdoor recreation that we the American people appreciate. Folks it is something to think about if you will want the next generations to enjoy the pleasure as you have had the pleasure of doing.

IT HAS BEEN

PROVEN that it can be done, we have more game and fish today than our forefathers had in the early part of the century. WHY because of careful management, enactment of laws, setting seasons. Who is responsible for all this? It is people that did look to the future, people that helped organize such Organizations as your local Fish & Game Clubs, YOUR LEAGUE OF KY Sportsmen, YOUR DEPT OF FISH & WILDLIFE DEPT. How long has it been since your eyes smarted from the burning of the wood lands? Yes Folks it is time for you as an individual to step in and take a part of helping preserve these great resources that we have left for the ones that will be following in your FOOTSTEPS. It would be a sad sight for the kids being born today, to never be able to see trees, streams and all the glowing green that comes with spring, then the colors of autumn, then the dull season of winter, with the expectations to look forward to another glorious eruption of spring once again. To Me that is life, and its parts of it today to help make the way for future generations. SO MANY OF YOU COULD BE HELPING A HELPING HAND TOWARD PRESERVING THESE THINGS, AND YOU ARE EXPECTING SOME ONE ELSE TO CARRY YOUR PART.

Start Now To Prevent Poverty Programs

Such as we have to day, it sure has come at an opportune time. I think we should appreciate the leaders of our nation to realize the needs of our people. The leaders today are paying the penalty of theirs, the past such as our forefathers, they believed the NATURAL RESOURCES WOULD ALWAYS BE FORE COMING. Folks you don't grow a tree overnight, you don't create a seam of coal overnight. The things of nature do not reproduce overnight. LET'S ALL START NOW to lending a hand to prevent POVERTY PROGRAMS for our future generations. It doesn't take man long now to take away from nature, that I took many hundreds of years to produce. We must realize this in order to leave something for the generations that is following us. Don't say there is nothing to do, for it is a great challenge to help restore our resources here in EASTERN KY. It is easy to give up, but it takes courage to push forward. It adds that seem to be great. On the other hand our forefathers faced great odds when they came in to this land of ours. At last many of our people are waking up to the facts that we have been pulverized to what you thought you owned in regard to your natural resources. Don't let it happen to the next generation. START CHANGING AND HELPING MAKE LAWS NOW. Our forefathers didn't realize what they were doing many years ago, let's wise up now to prevent the same thing happening to the ones that are following in your footsteps. In the first CHAPTER OF GENESIS OF THE BIBLE IT STATES THAT THESE MANY THINGS OF NATURE WERE PLACED UPON THE EARTH FOR MAN TO USE WISELY FOR HIS OWN BENEFITS. HAS HE DONE IT? FOLKS READ IT IN THIS CHAPTER.

Total-Electric... Everybody benefits

Low-cost electricity is the ambition of every progressive electric utility company. As customers use more electricity new advanced more efficient power producing facilities can be built—and such facilities help make possible lower electric rates. It is this cycle of low rates that leads to greater use, to greater efficiency and to still lower rates.

We have just announced another series of rate reductions of more than $216,700. Such reductions over the past three years have meant savings to our customers of over $497,200.

TOTAL-ELECTRIC SCHOOLS ARE THE BIGGEST BARGAIN IN ANY COMMUNITY'S EDUCATIONAL BUDGET

Of special significance in our latest rate reductions is one cent per kilowatt-hour electricity for Total-Electric public and parochial schools. We are especially proud of this low rate because it helps offset the increasing costs faced by schools today. School administrators are now finding that Total-Electric schools cost less to build, to finance, to maintain, to expand and to operate. These advantages mean that those who foot the educational bills—including all taxpayers—get more for their money.

OUR POLICY IS TO REDUCE RATES WHENEVER POSSIBLE

We believe our policy of reducing rates—and of holding the line on costs—has a strong economic impact on the area we serve. It stimulates growth, helps provide jobs for people and contributes to raising the standard of living. We are dedicated to the principle of providing superior electric service at the lowest possible cost. This dedication has made the American Electric Power System, of which Kentucky Power Company is a part, the largest investor-owned electric power producer in the United States.

Harry Caudill's Article In Atlantic Monthly Says Appalachian Bill Is 'Grim Hoax'

Governor William S. Erwin, a quarter of a million acres of land in his state have already been ruined. Unless strip mining is prohibited in the near future, the coalfields will be churned into total wreckage.

The coal industry urgently needs a stable year-round market. Such a market is available, but PARC and Congress are ignoring it. The Edison Electric Institute has estimated that $175 billion will have to be invested in new electricity-generating facilities within twenty years if a power shortage is to be averted. The trend in the electric-power industry is toward large mine-mouth generators, the power going to market by extra-high-voltage transmission lines. Such plants could be constructed in Appalachia with their power output carried cheaply and efficiently into all the great cities east of the Mississippi. The American Public Power Association, the National Rural Electric Co-operative Association, and a research group sponsored by Lockheed Space and Missile Company have concluded that these plants are feasible and that their product could be profitably marketed. And a small developmental royalty of perhaps one half mill per kilowatt hour produced would plow hundreds of millions of dollars back into regional facilities and services within a decade or two. Thus Appalachia could in large measure finance its own rehabilitation.

Such plants would make cheap power available everywhere in the Appalachian range. The lakes created to provide cooling water for the huge coal-burning generators would curtail the ravages of floods, simultaneously supplying water for new industries which the low-cost electricity would attract to the area. As in the Tennessee Valley, the lakes would bring fishermen, sportsmen, and vacationers. The modern trinity—electricity, water, and fertilizer—which has wrought such miracles for the TVA, is sorely needed in the valleys of Appalachia, but PARC and the Congress refused to learn from the nation's first great and successful attempt to rejuvenate a dying segment of the country.

To its credit, PARC considered electric-power development as a means of aiding the region's economy and requested congressional authorization for a full-scale power study. The Congress, goaded by lobbyists for the private power interests, moved with alacrity in the opposite direction and expressly prohibited the use of Appalachian Redevelopment Funds for the generation, transmission, or sale of electricity. Thus Appalachia, a land of heavy rainfall and vast coal reserves, is denied the blessings of cheap power—blessings bestowed by federal action on the Tennessee Valley and most of the West. The great need of the Appalachian people is education. The schools everywhere are poor, often dilapidated. Most of America's one-room schools are in mountain counties. 40 per cent of them in eastern Kentucky alone. The adult illiteracy rate is appallingly high. Teachers' salaries average about $1000 per year under national averages. The best teachers moved away years ago. The states refuse to levy severance taxes on minerals for the support of the schools. New generations are born into the old relentless cycle of poor people, poor schools, poor job preparation, poor pay, more poor people. Yet except for a meager appropriation for vocational education, PARC made no recommendations for improvement of the public schools. As matters now stand, the Administration's pending aid-to-education bill offers more long-range hope to the mountaineers than do PARC's remedial measures.

Another notion that a serious program would have embraced is the concept of new towns. At least two-thirds of the third of the existing house is dilapidated. Much of the population is spread out in string towns that stretch up the winding creek valleys. Other tens of thousands are clustered in crushing coal camps. All these communities lack adequate water supplies, and the available water is generally polluted. In fact, public health officials in one typical eastern Kentucky county recently estimated that 76 percent of the drinking water is "grossly contaminated." It is practically impossible to service the communities with adequate public facilities. Student transportation alone is a back-breaking burden on the meager school systems. The roads are for the most part ribbons of mud, and if new ones are built, maintenance costs will be extremely high. The people spread out in this fashion years ago when "new ground" farming was their principal livelihood. Now farming is passe. Even the family vegetable garden is disappearing. No valid justification for living on rough and isolated creek exists at the present time.

By every reasonable standard, the people would be far better off living in towns, where the amenities of life could be supplied at bearable costs. A few well-planned, solidly built and strongly organized new municipalities would absorb much of the present dwindling population and would bring new talent into the region. Both the Atomic Energy Commission and the Tennessee Valley Authority have had experience in building new cities. Their experience could have been invaluable in any undertaking to organize, house, and service the Appalachian population properly. The "new town" concept was urged upon PARC as an obvious and much-needed remedial measure, but those bold planners wasted no thought upon it.

The provision for building and financing hospitals is a patent absurdity. New hospitals can be built and under some circumstances funds can be made available for their operation, but existing hospitals cannot be added. Ten hospitals owned by Appalachian Regional Hospitals, Incorporated, were bought from the United Mine Workers of America's Health and Welfare Fund with federal money advanced by the Area Redevelopment Administration. This nonprofit corporation has done an excellent job of administering the hospital chain, maintaining superb standards and paying union wages to its employees. It has begun to operate in the black despite a fantastically high charity load. Yet these institutions—the best public facilities in Appalachia—are threatened with extinction for lack of operating capital. The administrators of the Appalachian Regional Development Act will be powerless to aid them. They may be compelled to watch these immensely beneficial hospitals close for lack of funds while simultaneously financing the construction of others.

An effort to obtain an amendment beneficial to satisfactory existing hospitals brought stern admonitions from PARC and congressional sponsors of the act that no changes could be tolerated, not even so much as "a single comma." However, when it came to another matter, Senator Robert Kennedy of New York was not deterred by such notions. His amendment to add thirteen relatively prosperous New York counties to Appalachia was promptly approved, and by legislative fiat the prosperous inhabitants of comparatively scrubbed upstate New York cities and towns became fellow sufferers with the miserable people of the Cumberland Plateau.

Paradoxically, not all of Appalachia is poor. There are "growth centers" within the region which are prosperous by national norms. In these areas—for example, Kingsport, Tennessee—industry has begun to diversify. Bank deposits are high. Schools, hospitals, libraries, and other public facilities and services are good by Appalachian standards. These islands of affluence in a sea of poverty grow as much by attracting people from other parts of America as by highlanders out of the surrounding countryside. A cruel provision in the legislation requires all the development funds to be spent in such a manner as to expedite the expansion of these fortunate centers of prosperity and growth. The fact that only a relatively handful of mountaineers live there did not deter PARC's planners. The growth of a few small cities will not affect the tens of thousands of people stranded in such abysmal backwaters as Helmer, Kentucky, and Stonega, Virginia.

Sorely needed is a plan of development based on the total environment of Appalachia, a plan that indexes and utilizes all its resources of people, soil, water, timber, and minerals to build a viable economy and a healthy social order for the entire territory. The accentuation of a spotty prosperity will make the rich wealthier still without alleviating the misery of the poor. This is a reversal of American policy in the development of the Tennessee Valley and of our great Western territories. Here is a new national policy which declares that when an American region falls into misfortune, only a few of the people and only a part of the land will be rescued, with the aid going to those who need it least.

What, then, will be the consequence of this loudly trumpeted legislation for putting more than $1 billion of taxpayers' money into Appalachia? If we ask, in a paraphrase of John Kennedy, "what it will do for us but for our country," the answer has to be a dismal one. The future of Appalachia is bleak indeed. The absentee landlords are pillaging the countryside of its coal, oil, gas, and timber. With the exception of a few counties in Pennsylvania, Tennessee, and North Carolina, little of value is being manufactured anywhere in the huge territory. PARC's scheme will accelerate the bleeding of resources without relieving the region's most pressing ills. The hopes of the people have been stirred. Disillusionment is sure to follow. The old people are dying. The young are leaving. The middle-aged subsist on the dole. In the estimation of the corporations that control the resources, most of the inhabitants are simply superfluous. Their lands are worn out. They possess no skills that the nation needs. Perhaps if they are retrained, they, too, will go away and stop bothering the public conscience. Appalachia is becoming a dark island near the heart of America, peopled in large measure by be-numbed human relics and totally despoiled of its natural resources.

Perhaps in any event, those who had hoped for a meaningful Appalachian development program as far-reaching and revolutionary as was TVA thirty years ago have been bitterly disappointed. Unless Congress takes a new look at its number one trouble spot and unless the American public is aroused as the people of England were aroused over the fate of Wales forty years ago, Appalachia can go back to sleep—the sodden sleep of the impoverished, the embittered, and the hopeless.

MY DAD'S DINNER PAIL

Preserve that old kettle, so blackened and worn;
It belonged to my father before I was born;
It hung in a corner beyant on a nail—
'Twas the emblem of labor, my dad's dinner pail.
Chorus:

It glistened like silver, so sparkling and bright;
I am fond of the trifle that held his wee bite;
In summer or winter; in snow, rain or hail,
I've carried that kettle, my dad's dinner pail.
When the bell rang for mealtime my father'd come down—
He'd eat with the workmen about on the ground;
He'd share with the laborer and he'd go bail,
You would never reach the bottom of dad's dinner pail.
If the day should be rainy my father'd stop home,
And he'd polish his kettle as clane as a stone;
He'd joke with my mother and me he would whale.
If I put a finger on dad's dinner pail.
There's a place for the coffee and also for bread,
The corned beef and praties, and oft it was said:
"Go fill it with porter, with beer or with ale,"
The drink would taste sweeter from dad's dinner pail.

Funds For Carrs Fork Reservoir In Proposed Legislation

It was announced today by Congressman Carl D. Perkins that the United States House of Representatives would be taking up this week legislation to appropriate $12,150,000 for the continuation of construction of four major flood control reservoirs in the Eastern Kentucky area.

The measure, in addition, contains $1,693,000 for the construction of the John Flannagan and the North Fork of Pound Reservoirs in the upper reaches of the Big Sandy basin and $24,500 to continue investigation for the development of new reservoirs in the upper Kentucky River basin. These funds are contained in the Public Works Appropriation bill providing funds for the fiscal year beginning this June 30.

Other legislative activity of importance related by Representative Perkins involved House Education and Labor Committee consideration of legislation that he had sponsored to provide disaster assistance to Public School districts in providing funds for operating schools over a five-year period where such schools had been affected by a major disaster declared by the President.

Perkins said that present levels of emergency assistance provided by existing legislation did not go far enough in furnishing schools with the necessary funds to support on-going education programs where school buildings and school operations had been disrupted or impaired as a result of floods and other catastrophes. In addition to providing funds for school operating costs, the legislation would assist local communities in financing new structures to replace school buildings destroyed by flood or other disaster.

The legislation was introduced by Congressman Perkins on May 3. On May 18, the General Subcommittee on Education, of which Perkins is Chairman, initiated hearings were concluded on May 26, and last week the Perkins Subcommittee reported the legislation to the Full Committee which would implement Perkins' disaster relief program for local school districts. Perkins said "I am extremely hopeful that the Full Committee will take this measure up at its regularly scheduled June 24 meeting."

Funds included in the Public Works Appropriation bill to be debated by the House this week, provides $5,500,000 for the Fishtrap Reservoir, $2,625,000 for the John Flannagan Reservoir, $1,058,000 for the North Fork of Pound Reservoir, all in the Big Sandy basin, and $6,950,000 for the Grayson Reservoir, $3,000,000 for the Cave Run Reservoir and $2,200,000 for the Carrs Fork Reservoir. Perkins said that every effort would be made to secure these funds in the finally passed version of the bill. When the measure passes the House, it will then go to the Senate for further action.

State Court of Appeals Upholds Conviction In Criminal Libel Suit

In a split decision Friday the Kentucky Court of Appeals upheld the conviction of Steve Ashton on criminal libel charges.

Ashton was convicted in Perry Circuit Court in 1963 following an incident that came out of the labor trouble of '63.

The New York City youth was fined $3000.00 and sentenced to 6 months in jail for publishing a pamphlet which allegedly defamed Hazard Police Chief Bud Luttrell, Perry County Sheriff Charlie Combs and Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Nolan, publishers of the Hazard Herald.

The lawyers for Ashton contended that the nature of the common law offense was so vague and inclusive that it deprived their client of his freedom of speech and due process.

Three of the seven justices who dissented Chief Justice John Moreman, and Judges Brady Stewart and James Miliken said the English common law of criminal libel is consistent with constitutional provisions.

They added that elements of the crime are so indefinite and uncertain that it should not be enforced as an offense in Kentucky.

Appellate Commissioner Watson Clay's majority opinion found no reversible error in the trial.

He said Ashton admits that certain statements from the pamphlet, "Notes on a Mountain Strike," were defamatory and false.

He pointed out that the trial judge made a commendable effort to identify the crime more fully than was done in the indictment.

According to Clay the crime of criminal libel is recognized throughout the United States.

"It makes no difference that no evidence was deferred to show that Ashton's defamatory statements actually were made with malice," Clay said. "The defendant was a stranger in the community," Clay added, "this was a period of strife between union and non-union miners and the defendant and the prosecuting witnesses were in opposing camps. "From all these facts a jury could conclude that the defendant was motivated by actual malice; that is, he knowingly or in reckless disregard of the truth published these false statements for the purpose of exposing the prosecuting witnesses to public degradation."

Clay added that Ashton agreed to abide by a majority verdict so that his claim that only 10 of 12 jurors voted for conviction won't standup.

"It is our conviction that at least in misdemeanor cases the defendant may waive not only a 12-man jury but an animosity of the jurors in reaching their verdict," he said, "provided always that such waiver agreement is entered into understandingly and voluntarily."

One legal source added that the case might be taken eventually to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Ashton, an Oberlin College Olin student said he came to Eastern Kentucky to help impoverished mountain youth.

Eastern Kentucky Miners To Sponsor Labor Day Rally

District 30 of the United Mine Workers of America, will sponsor one of the largest Labor Day rallies in its history at the Old Race Track in Allen, Kentucky, according to Joe Davis, chairman of the committee planning the rally.

Davis reports that International President W. A. "Tony" Boyle has been invited to address the rally and that other speakers will include District 30 President, C. E. Beane, and Secretary-Treasurer Matt Combs.

There will be professional entertainment including country music, clowns and many other acts. Refreshments and sandwiches will be available. There will also be prizes including a 1965 Plymouth that will go to a lucky ticket-holder, and a beauty contest.

District 30's Labor Day rallies have become a tradition in the Eastern Kentucky mountains. Only the mass meeting held annually at Cadillac Square in Detroit, Michigan, has attracted larger crowds. In the middle 1950's District 30's rally annually drew gathers of 50,000 to 60,000 persons.

A committee of sixty-two (62), ates in the school's 90-year history representing all Local Unions in District 30, is currently working together to make this rally one that all local miners and their friends will remember for a long time.

Caudill Asks Court To Stop Strip-Mining

Harry Caudill, Whitesburg author and attorney, has asked the Knott County Circuit Court to stop the strip mining operation that landowners in the Clear Creek section of Knott County say is causing a ruinous washing of a loosened overburden onto their property.

Caudill's aim with the filing rights to recover the minerals without restrictions as to the means of recovery. Caudill's petition denies that the deed in question, dated October 27, 1905, authorized strip mining.

It charges that the strip mining operation at Hardburly near the head of Clear Creek has loosened hundreds of thousands of tons of dirt and shattered stone, broken trees and caused other spoil and waste.

Heavy rainfall is causing debris to wash in large quantities into Clear Creek and on to the valley land, the petition charges.

If the operation is continued the petition says, "these defendants and all others similarly situated on Clear Creek will lose their entire respective investments."

A large motorecade from Knott, Perry, Letcher and Leslie Counties will leave tomorrow morning for Frankfort and a meeting with Governor Breathitt to ask him for tighter strip mine laws.

Past court decisions have favored the operators on the grounds that broad-form deeds drawn many years ago give
